National Sleep Foundation’s Sleep Health Journal Wins PROSE Award for Best New Journal

The National Sleep Foundation (NSF) is proud to announce that Sleep Health: Journal of the National Sleep Foundation is the 2016 winner of the Association of American Publishers’ award for Best New Journal in Science, Technology and Medicine. Sleep Health was also a finalist for the 2016 Excellence in Biological & Life Sciences award.

“Winning the Best New Journal award is wonderful recognition of the important work of Sleep Health,” says National Sleep Foundation CEO David M. Cloud. “We believed there was a need for a journal that would extend sleep research across many diverse, related fields. It’s great to know our peers agree.”

The National Sleep Foundation launched Sleep Health in March 2015 as a multidisciplinary journal exploring sleep’s role in population health. Aligned with the National Sleep Foundation’s global authoritative, evidence-based voice for sleep health, the Journal serves as the foremost publication for manuscripts that advance the sleep health of all members of society.

Now in its 40th year, the Association of American Publishers’ PROSE Awards recognize the best in professional and scholarly publishing.
